

Collaborative Liberation Arts Workshop Series (CLAWS)

Spring Session:

Movement Metamorphosis

a 5-week workshop series using movement and dance to open to change from within.

Biodanza facilitated by Mirjam Krohne

Five Saturdays, April 22 – May 20, 2017
12-2 pm

Studio FAB 2525 Telegraph Ave
Oakland, CA 94612

CLAWS is a workshop series in Oakland that aims to create a laboratory where we can:

- experiment with new forms of collaboration using writing, theater and movement arts.
- explore how race, class and gender oppression can be resisted and transformed.
- work with one another inside and outside of sessions to create performance, story, and movement that can energize and liberate—personally and socially.
- create a community of reflection, performance and action.

Biodanza is a radical worldwide system that wakens our potential to live life fully.

It does this by playfully unblocking five human potentials: vitality, sexuality, affection, creativity, and transcendence. Through facilitated exercises in authentic movement, music, and touch, Biodanza uses the collective power of the group to create an environment where we can safely explore expanding our boundaries in a community of co-creators Mirjam Krohne graduated in 2012 from the SF school of Biodanza and has been facilitating Biodanza ever since. She creates customized classes for adults as well as youth, children and families.

REGISTER AT

www.reimaginerpe.org/claws
or use form on reverse of this flyer

REIMAGINE!

Movements Making Media
www.reimaginerpe.org

